

A guide for individuals: discrimination in the workplace

Unfortunately discrimination in the workplace has not been confined to the annals of history. If you are an employer or you find yourself subject to discrimination it is important to know your rights and how the law can offer protection.

Sometimes even innocent actions by employers can result in unintentional discriminatory behaviour. If you are an employer or an employee concerned about discrimination in the workplace, please read our latest article here.

by Helena Oxley

What is a special guardianship order?

The multiple application stages, forms, checks and assessments can be confusing and intimidating without professional help. Whether you simply need advice on the process or you want to instruct a lawyer, read our latest article.

by Phoebe Trott

How to ensure your loved ones are protected

...and your inheritance is given to the right people! If you would like to be certain that your loved ones are protected and your inheritance will be given to the people you want when you are no longer here, read our latest article here.

by Claire Read

Buying and selling a business - preparation is key

Whether you are considering an exit from or entrance into a business. If you plan to purchase shares in a company, or to sell your shares, there are important aspects of which you should be aware. Here we set out some of the most relevant points.

by Tracey Dickens

look

For some free advice just register

In case you missed it

- New IT director
- Recruitment of dispute resolution solicitor
- Will no fault divorce affect my financial settlement
- Would you take a pay cut to work from home?