

BLong

SEPTEMBER 2021

Health and safety law(s) in construction

Health and safety is an obvious concern across all industries. It's particular importance within the construction sector, given the scope of work and nature of activities undertaken, and, in particular, the associated risks that naturally prevail.

Organisations and individuals need to take a proactive approach to health and safety. That will include discussing health and safety at a senior level, documenting good safety practices, running, learning from and implementing the results of audits, responding to and learning from near misses and assessing immediate areas for improvement.

by Tej Thakkar

Disputes between homeowners & building contractors

by Perdeep Grewal

Does your contract cover prior works?

by Peter Allen

Defending adjudication: How to avoid common pitfalls

by Suryen Nullatamby

In case you missed it

- Health and safety offence sentencing guidelines
- How to avoid common pitfalls in your construction project
- New head of Regulatory
- Staff celebrate 20 years service

For some free advice

just register